

- 1. The idea of a modern architecture in the nineteenth century
- 2. Industrialization and the city: The skyscraper as type and symbol
- 3. The search for new forms and the problems of ornament
- 4. Rationalism, the engineering tradition and reinforced concrete
- 5. Arts and crafts ideals in Britain and the U.S.A.
- 6. Responses to mechanization: the Deutscher Werkbund and futurism
- 7. The architectural system of Frank Lloyd Wright
- 8. National myths and classical transformations
- 9. Cubism, de stijl and new conceptions of space
- 10. Le Corbusier's quest for ideal form
- 11. Walter Gropius, German expressionism and the Bauhaus
- 12. Architecture and revolution in Russia
- 13. Skyscraper and suburb: The U.S.A. between the wars
- 14. The ideal community: Alternatives to the industrial city
- 15. The international style, the individual talent and the myth of functionalism
- 16. The image and idea of Le Corbusier's Villa Savoye at Poissy --
- 17. The continuity of older traditions
- 18. Nature and the machine: Mies van der Rohe, Wright and Le Corbusier in the 1930s
- 19. The spread of modern architecture to Britain and Scandinavia
- 20. Totalitarian critiques of the modern movement
- 21. International, national, regional: The diversity of a new tradition
- 22. Modern architecture in the U.S.A.: Immigration and consolidation
- 23. Form and meaning in the late works of Le Corbusier
- 24. The unite d'habitation at Marseilles as a collective housing prototype
- 25. Alvar Aalto and Scandinavian developments
- 26. Disjunctions and continuities in the Europe of the 1950s
- 27. The process of absorption: Latin America, Australia, Japan
- 28. On monuments and monumentality: Louis I. Kahn
- 29. Architecture and anti-architecture in Britain
- 30. Extension and critique in the 1960s
- 31. Modernity, tradition and identity in the developing world
- 32. Pluralism in the 1970s --
- 33. Modern architecture and memory: New perceptions of the past
- 34. The universal and the local: Landscape, climate and culture
- 35. Technology, abstraction and ideas of nature
- Conclusion: Modernity, tradition, authenticity.