Table of Contents

- List of Tables and figures p. xii
- Note to the instructor p. xiii
- 1.2.2 How to read linguistic examples p. 13
- Further reading p. 27
- Note to the Student p. xiv
- 1.1.1 What is the study of syntax about? p. 1
- 1.3.2 Promotion and demotion Processes p. 22
- Acknowledgments p. xvi
- 1.1.2 Language Change p. 7
- 1.3 Why do languages have Syntax? p. 19
- List of abbreviations used in examples p. xvii
- 1.2.1 Why not just use examples from English? p. 11
- 1 What is Syntax? p. 1
- 1.1 Some concepts and misconceptions p. 1
- 1.3.1 Word Order p. 19
- 1.3.3 All languages have structure p. 24
- 1.2 Use of linguistic examples p. 11
- Exercises p. 27
- 2 Words belong to different classes p. 33
- 2.1 Identifying word classes p. 33
- 2.1.2 Starting to identify nouns, adjectives and verbs p. 34
- 2.1.3 An illustration: How do speakers of a language indentify word classes? p. 37
- 2.2.2 Verbs and their grammatical categories p. 43
- 2.3 Nouns p. 48
- 2.3.1 Semantic roles for noun phrases p. 4
- 2.3.2 Syntactic roles for noun phrases p. 49
- 2.3.3 Nouns and their grammatical categories p. 52
- 2.3.4 Nouns, definiteness and determiners p. 55
- 2.4 Adjectives p. 58
- 2.1.1 How Can we tell that words belong to different classes? p. 33
- 2.2 Verbs p. 40
- 2.2.1 An introduction to verb classes p. 40
- 2.4.1 Positions and functions of adjectives p. 58
- 2.4.2 Adjectives and intensifiers p. 59
- 2.4.3 Adjectives and their grammatical categories p. 60
- 2.4.4 Are adjectives essential? p. 60
- 2.5 Adverbs p. 63
- 2.5.1 Adverbs and adjectives p. 63
- 2.5.2 The adjunct function p. 65
- 2.6 Prepostions p. 66
- 2.6.1 Identifying prepositions in English p. 66
- 2.6.2 Postpositions p. 67
- 2.6.3 Grammatical categories for adpositions p. 68
- 2.7 Conclusion p. 68

- Further reading p. 69
- Exercises p. 70
- 3 Looking inside sentences p. 77
- 3.1 Finiteness and auxiliaries p. 77
- 3.1.1 Independent clauses p. 77
- 3.1.2 Finiteness p. 78
- 3.1.3 Main verbs and verbal auxiliaries p. 80
- 3.1.4 Ways to express the grammatical categories for verbs p. 82
- 3.1.5 Non-finite verbs p. 84
- 3.1.6 Co-ordination of clauses p. 88
- 3.1.7 Summary p. 88
- 3.2 Introduction to subordination p. 89
- 3.2.1 Complement clauses p. 89
- 3.2.2 Adjunct or adverbial clauses p. 92
- 3.2.3 Identifying subordinate clauses p. 93
- 3.2.4 Special Properties of root clauses p. 94
- 3.2.5 Some cross-linguistic variation in subordination p. 97
- 3.2.6 Summary: Properties of subordinate clauses and root clauses p. 98
- 3.3 Major cross-linguistic variations p. 99
- 3.3.1 The co-ordination strategy p. 99
- 3.3.2 Nominalization p. 101
- 3.3.3 Serial verbs p. 102
- 3.3.4 Summary p. 105
- Further reading p. 105
- Exercises p. 105
- 4 Heads and their dependents p. 114
- 4.1 Heads and their dependents p. 114
- 4.1.1 What is a head? p. 114
- 4.1.2 The influence of heads on their dependents p. 115
- 4.1.3 Summary: The properties of heads p. 117
- 4.1.4 More about dependents: Adjuncts and complements p. 118
- 4.1.5 More about verb classes: Verbs and their complements p. 120
- 4.1.6 Other heads and their complements p. 123
- 4.1.7 Summary: The main properties of complements vs. adjuncts p. 124
- 4.1.8 Is the noun Phrase really a determiner phrase? p. 125
- 4.1.9 Phrases within phrases p. 126
- 4.2 Where does the head occur in a phrase? Head-initial and head-final languages p. 126
- 4.2.1 Head-initial languages p. 127
- 4.2.2 Head-final language p. 128
- 4.2.3 An exercise on head-initial and head-final constructions p. 129
- 4.3 Head-marking and dependent-making languages p. 130
- 4.3.1 Definitions and illustrations: Syntactic relationships between heads and dependents p. 130
- 4.3.2 Head adposition and its NP object p. 131
- 4.3.3 The clause: A head verb and the arguments of the verb p. 133
- 4.3.4 Head noun and dependent possessor NP p. 136

- 4.3.5 Head noun and dependent AP p. 137
- 4.3.6 An exercise on head-marking and dependent-marking p. 138
- 4.3.7 Some typological distinctions between languages p. 139
- 4.3.8 Summary p. 142
- Further reading p. 142
- Exercises p. 143
- 5 How do we indentify constituents p. 151
- 5.1 Discovering the structure of sentences p. 151
- 5.1.1 Evidence of structure in sentences p. 151
- 5.1.2 Some syntactic tests for constituent structure p. 153
- 5.1.3 Introduction to constituent structure trees p. 159
- 5.1.4 Summary p. 164
- 5.2 Relationships within the tree p. 164
- 5.3 Developing detailed tree diagrams and tests for constituent structure p. 167
- 5.3.1 Verb classes and constituent structure tests p. 167
- 5.3.2 The co-ordination test for constituency p. 174
- 5.3.3 Do all languages have the same constituents? p. 176
- 5.3.4 An introduction to the bar notation p. 177
- 5.4 Summary p. 181
- Further reading p. 181
- Exercises p. 182
- 6 Relationships within the clause p. 188
- 6.1 Indicating grammatical relations in the clause p. 188
- 6.2 Order of Phrases within the clause p. 189
- 6.2.1 Basic and marked orders p. 189
- 6.2.2 Statistical patterns p. 191
- 6.3 Case systems p. 193
- 6.3.1 Ways of dividing core arguments p. 193
- 6.3.2 Nominative/accusative systems p. 196
- 6.3.3 Ergative/absolutive systems p. 197
- 6.3.4 Split Systems I p. 198
- 6.3.5 Marked and unmarked forms p. 201
- 6.4 Agreement and cross-referencing p. 201
- 6.4.1 What does verb agreement involve? p. 201
- 6.4.2 Nominative/accusative agreement systems p. 202
- 6.4.3 Ergative/absolutive agreement systems p. 205
- 6.4.4 Split systems II p. 206
- 6.5 Grammatical relations p. 207
- 6.5.1 Investigating core grammatical relations p. 207
- 6.5.2 Subjects: Typical cross-linguistic properties p. 208
- 6.5.3 An examination of subjects in specific languages p. 209
- 6.6 Free word order: A case study p. 219
- 6.7 Summary p. 222
- Further reading p. 223
- Exercises p. 223
- 7.1 Passives and impersonals p. 232

- 7.1.1 The passive construction and transitive verbs p. 232
- 7.1.2 The Impersonal construction p. 238
- 7.2 The antipassive p. 239
- 7.2.2 Primary grammatical relations and grammatical pivots p. 241
- 7.3 The applicative construction p. 247
- 7.4 The causative construction p. 251
- 6.5.4 Objects p. 217
- 7 Processes that change grammatical relations p. 232
- 7.2.1 Basic facts p. 239
- 7.5 Summary p. 256
- Further reading p. 256
- Exercises p. 256
- 8 Wh-Constructions: Questions and relative clauses p. 267
- 8.1 Wh-questions p. 267
- 8.1.3 Multiple wh-questions p. 273
- 8.2 Relative clauses p. 275
- 8.2.2 Cross-linguistic variation in relative clauses p. 278
- 8.3 Focus movements and scrambling p. 283
- Exercises p. 287
- 9 Asking questions about syntax p. 298
- 9.1 Syntactic description: What questions to investigate p. 298
- 9.2 A case study: Grammatical sketch of Colloquial Welsh p. 302
- 9.3 Some questions concerning syntax p. 309
- 9.4 Last words: More syntax ahead p. 312
- References p. 323
- Language index p. 333
- Subject index p. 336
- Sources of data used in example p. 315
- 8.1.1 Languages with wh-movement p. 267
- 8.1.2 Languages With wh-in-situ wh-questions p. 271
- 8.2.1 Relative clauses in English p. 275
- Further reading p. 287
- 8.4 Some conclusions p. 286
- Glossary p. 318