

Table of Contents

- List of Contributors p. vii
- Introduction: New Directions in Writing as a Learning Activity Perry D. Klein and Pietro Boscolo and Carmen Gelati and Lori C. Kirkpatrick p. 1
- Writing to Argue: Writing as a Tool for Oral and Written Argumentation Silvia Del Longo and Lerida Cisotto p. 15
- Writing as a Vocabulary Learning Tool Kenan Dikilitas and Jerome C. Bush p. 44
- Supportive Writing Assignments for Less Skilled Writers in the Mathematics Classroom Markus Linnemann and Sabine Stephany p. 66
- Writing to Engage Students in Historical Reasoning Jannet van Brie and Carla van Boxtel and Marline Braaksma p. 94
- Writing to Learn from Multiple-Source Inquiry Activities in History Jennifer Wiley and Brent Steffens and M. Anne Britt and Thomas D. Griffin p. 120
- Strategy Instruction in Writing in Academic Disciplines Charles A. MacArthur p. 149
- Writing a Synthesis from Multiple Sources as a Learning Activity Mar Mateos and Isabel Solé and Elena Martín and Isabel Cuevas and Mariana Miras and Nuria Castells p. 169
- Summary Writing as a Tool for Improving the Comprehension of Expository Texts: An Intervention Study in a Primary School Carmen Gelati and Nicoletta Galvan and Pietro Boscoto p. 191
- Moving from "Fuzziness" to Canonical Knowledge: The Role of Writing in Developing Cognitive and Representational Resources Brian Hand and Mary Grace Villanueva and Sae Yeol Yoon p. 217
- Writing about Reading to Advance Thinking: A Study in Situated Cognitive Development Charles Bazerman and Kelly Simon and Patrick Pieng p. 249
- University Students' Knowledge Construction during Face to Face Collaborative Writing Minna Nykopp and Miika Marttunen and Leena Laurinen p. 277
- Knowledge Construction in Collaborative Science Writing: Strategic Simplicity, Distributed Complexity, and Explanatory Sophistication Perry D. Klein p. 300
- References p. 327
- Author Index p. 375
- Subject Index p. 385